Cry out with joy to God all the earth.

The Gospel this Sunday is part of what is known as Our Lord's farewell discourse. It was the night before his death and Our Lord speaks of 'going away' but he promises the disciples that they won't be left alone. He knows that they will need comforting and reassuring and that when he leaves them, they won't know what to do.

One of our greatest fears is being abandoned or left alone and many stories, books and films often use this fear of being abandoned - all alone. But Jesus promises that this won't happen to us. He will send his spirit to be our advocate and he reminds us that if we love him, we will keep his commandments.

Love is not about saying the right thing it is also about doing the right thing. So, if we seek to preach love to others but live our own lives in a way that conveys that we don't really believe what we are preaching then we are wasting our time.

'Anyone who receives my commandments and keeps them will be one who loves me'.

'If you love me you will keep my commandments' is not just about keeping rules but about really 'living' our faith. It really means making changes to our lives and working at how we behave and think, helped by the Holy Spirit. Do we allow our society, based upon material wealth, to dominate how we think and behave? Or do we let ourselves be influenced by Our Lord and what he would want us to think and do. We can ask ourselves, 'Do we live in the way that Jesus wants us to by following the Church's teaching?' When we do, Jesus lives within us and it is only then that we are able to take the love of Jesus to others. God bless. Deacon Simon.
